Britiſh Dungeons and Priſon Ships.

HAVRE, JANUARY 9.

Yeſterday entered this harbour the Britiſh flag of truce, the Ariel, capt. Wilſon, from Porcheſter, with 300 French priſoners, viz. 189 ſoldiers and 111 ſailors.

The declaration of thoſe priſoners excites the greateſt uneaſineſs, with regard to the fate of our unfortunate countrymen remaining in priſon. It is my duty to make it known, in order that government may in its wiſdom deviſe means for putting a ſtop to proſecutions ſo attrocious.

A captain of a French privateer, who was taken and carried into Ireland, affirms, and has ſigned his declaration, that during three months he was ſhut up in a priſon, open to the inclemency of the weather, it has happened that upon the leaſt noiſe, they fired guns from without, upon the group of priſoners: theſe unheard of cruelties have often been repeated.

In the priſons of Porcheſter priſoners receive only a pound and a half of bread a day and water, this was the only thing allowed them for nouriſhment.

It is now two months paſt that the officers taken on board the French national ſhips, have been ſeized in the night, and tranſported from their quarters on ſhore to the priſon ſhips, where they are kept in cloſe confinement from four in the evening to nine in the morning. Soldiers, ſailors, officers and captains are indiſcriminately crowded together in narrow holes. The food diſtributed there conſiſts of fourteen ounces of brown and only half baked bread, half a pound of meat, not regularly ſupplied, and often reduced to a quarter; with this wretched and ſcanty allowance they are obliged to ſuffer every kind of ill treatment.

The priſoners all agree in ſtating, that the propoſed deſcent has ſpread the greateſt conſternation among the Engliſh, and exaſperates them againſt their government, which has provoked the diſaſters that await them, and the juſt vengeance the French are about to inflict on it.

A letter from an officer on board the Vigilant of 64 guns, priſon ſhip at Plymouth, dated Dec. 28th, confirms the above particulars, and ſays among others, "We are fed, or rather merely prevented from being famiſhed to death, with a pound of bread, brown, coarſe, heavy, and not ſufficiently baked; half a pound of meat, and water, yet of this latter article not even as much as we wiſh for. It muſt be obſerved that the Engliſh pound is only 14 French ounces; beſides, the frauds of the contractors and the tythes of the captain on board muſt alſo be brought in account, and then you may readily believe that we receive only 12 ounces of bread and three ounces of meat a day. One of our unfortunate companions on board this ſhip has juſt hung himſelf out of deſpair.

Extract from the Report,

Made by Riou in the Council of Five Hundred, on the 24th of January, on the ſubject of the ſuccours to be given to the Frenchmen kept priſoners in England.

"The cruelties which our unfortunate fellow cirtizens have ſuffered in the unhealthy dungeons they are confined in, would fill up a whole volume. Some of them are ſhut up in old decaying ſhips, and others in huts ſlightly raiſed with boards, through the chaſms of which the cold and humidity finds every where room to penetrate; ſtraw is refuſed them, they are forced to crouch on the earth in the mud. The moſt infamous invectives are every day addreſſed to them; if they attempt to take a little freſh air, a brutiſh populace throw dirt in their faces. Upon the leaſt pretexts they are brow beat, often fired at with muſkets.—Theſe facts are well aſtabliſhed; they are recorded in a great number of pieces communicated to your commiſſion. Judge of their tenor by that which I am about to read and which is not one of the moſt affecting.—There are ſome which it would be impoſſible to bear the reading of.

Riou read here an addreſs from the owners of privateers, captains, officers and ſailors of the canton of Nantz wherein the declaration of Frenchmen lately returned from the Engliſh priſons, is communicated to the Executive Directory.

It ſtates that the French priſoners receive none but proviſons of the worſt kind, and if any one refuſes them he is put to faſting for 48 hours. "There, the addreſs ſays, we have found ourſels packed up to the number of 72 men, in a hutt 17 feet ſquare, and 19 high; and many of thoſe hutts are holes dug out in the earth at the foot of a mountain through which the rain filtrates and overflows the dungeons, where the want of freſh air, of hammocks, ſtraw and bread is nothing in compariſon to the attrocities which the Engliſh agents, officers, ſoldiers and jailors, take the liberty to exerciſe daily upon the priſoners. One day at Plymouth, a French priſoner was aimed at by a ſoldier and killed. The Commiſſary White is ſent for—he arrives, raiſes the corpſe, and puſhes it with his foot—Juſtice is demanded—He coldly anſwers: "It is but a Frenchman," and withdraws.

Repreſentatives, you tremble with horror, continued Riou. Well, ſince that paper was drawn up, the horrors have been augmented and moſt unheard of atrocity has juſt filled up the meaſure of their ferocity. All the Republicans are indiſcriminately penned up in dungeons. They pay no regard to rank, to age nor to the ſex, even at the moment when the latter ought above all to be held ſacred. A woman laid in in an infected yard, and during 48 hours agony ſhe found her ſelf entirely abandoned. The tigers who guarded the priſon refuſed her even a drink of water. They allow only a ſcanty ſupply of wholeſome victuals to our unfortunate fellow-citizens, and, can you believe it, Frenchmen, the carcaſe of a dog has been eagerly diſputed for by thoſe deplorable victims of Engliſh ferocity.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED.

January 26.

Santhonax aſcends the Roſtrum, and after taking the oath of hatred to royalty, he ſays: It is now four months and a half that I have left St. Domingo, ſurrounded by every kind of dangers. I have already made my appearance before the Directory, in order to give a general account of my adminiſtration. I ſhall lay it before you with ſo much the more confidence, ſince I am ſure that patriotic deputies will be my judges.

I ſhall not reſort to Phillipics to repel the calumnies directed againſt me.

Facts, and the reſult of arithmetical calculations, ſhall confound my accuſers. The Vaublancs and their party, the members of the faction you have overthrown, arraigned my conduct. In the colonies I was ſurrounded with peop'e leagued with the ſame faction, whoſe plots I intend ſhortly to unveil. I deſire the greateſt ſeverity and the moſt inflexible juſtice, and requeſt the liberty to preſent you my report, within ten days. Agreed.

BASLE, JAN. 15.

The deputation ſent by the great council of Baſle to re-eſtabliſh order in the bailiwick of Farnſbourg, has been ill received by the people of the country: they refuſed to liſten to the meſſage, and accompanied the refuſal with threats. The town of Liechtſtal, impatient bearing the yoke of the canton of Baſle, whoſe ſubject it was, expreſſed its diſpoſition in a ſtriking manner: Its inhabitants exhumated the body of the firſt pretor, appointed there by the canton of Baſle at the epoch of its ſubjection. They broke to pieces a ſtatue of that pretor and proclaimed their determination to recover their rights.

The bad ſucceſs of the firſt deputation compoſed of enemies to the intereſts of the country people, occaſioned the nomination of another whoſe members were diſtinguiſhed for their attachment to equality: Counſellor Legrand was one of the deputation. Theſe new deputies met with a very flattering reception. They re-eſtabliſhed without difficulty tranquility among the inhabitants, who, on their part, preſented a petition to be laid before government. The great council have received the petition, and appointed immediately a committee to deviſe the means of ſatisfying the petitioners.

The object of the petition is to obtain,

1ſt, Liberty and Equality, and an elective national repreſentation.

2d, The incorporation of the towns with the country places, in order that they may form but one body, governed by the ſame laws.

3d, The ſpeedy eſtabliſhment of a popular aſſembly repreſenting the towns as well as the country, in order to frame proviſionally the neceſſary laws.

JANUARY 25.

Revolution in the government of the Canton of Baſle.

The revolution is effected in this Canton, without convulſion, without the ſhedding of a drop of blood. The great council, who until now exerciſed excluſively the rights of ſovereignty, has, on the 20th inſtant, agreed to the demands of the ſubjects; a formal act of this convention has been drawn up, which was ſent to the other cantons and communicated to the diplomatic agents of foreign powers. The great council at the ſame time diſpatched the following letter to citizen Ochs, the ſupreme tribune and envoy of the canton of Baſle near the Executive Directory of the French republic:

"The happy epoch of the cloſeſt union between the inhabitants of this city and thoſe of the country is arrived. We have this moment ſolemnly recognized the principles of liberty and equality, the ſacred and impreſcriptible rights of man—What a charming proſpect into futurity, preſents itſelf to our dear country.

"How many examples of pure patriotiſm ſhall we not be able to offer! How greatly will the zeal for the general intereſts increaſe in force and activity. Thanks to you, moſt beloved father of a country, for the unſhaken perſeverance and firmneſs, you have evinced;—Thanks for the ſentiments, which we obſerved you to expreſs on every occaſion, with lively energy in the tone of perfect conviction:—Thanks to you, for the adroit direction you have known to give to our political regeneration. The happineſs of your fellow citizens will be your beſt recompence. Receive the aſſurance of our perfect conſideration" &c. &c.

On the 22d inſt. the tree of liberty has been planted in the centre of the city.

After the ceremony was over, a number of young female citizens dreſſed in white and decorated with tri-color ſcarfs ſtept forward attended by a military eſcort, and amidſt the ſounds of a rural and patriotic muſic, they laid garlands or flowers at the foot of the tree, and danced around it amidſt the applauſe and acclamations of the ſpectators. From hence they proceeded to a temple in the vicinity, where they ſung a hymn to Liberty. The tri-color flag was hoiſted at the top of the higheſt ſteeple in the city, amidſt repeated diſcharges of the artillery: A ſuperb ball cloſed the Feto.

This day will eſtabliſh a remarkable epoch in the hiſtory of Switzerland. May the other cantons ſoon follow the example of Baſle, which has juſt proved, that it is eaſy to make ſalutary reforms, when there is but a ſerious inclination to do it.

PARIS, JAN. 31.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED.

Coupé—(member from the North Coaſt) read the following leter from the celebrated Patriot, Thomas Paine:

Thomas Poine to the Council of Five Hundred.

Citizens-Repreſentatives,

Though it is not convenient to me, in the preſent ſituation of my affairs to ſubſcribe to the loan towards the deſcent upon England, my economy permits me to make a ſmall patriotic donation. I ſend an hundred livres, and with it, all the wiſhes of my heart for the ſucceſs of the deſcent, and a voluntary offer of any ſervice I can render to promote it.

There will be no laſting peace for France nor for the world, until the tyranny and corruption of the Engliſh government be aboliſhed, and England, like Italy, become a ſiſter Republic.—As to thoſe men, whether in England, Scotland, or Ireland, who, like Robeſpierre in France, are covered with crimes, they, like him, have no other reſource, than in committing more; but the maſs of the people are friends to liberty.—Tyranny and taxation oppreſs them but they merit to be free.

Accept, citizen repreſentatives, the congratulations of an ancient colleague on the dangers we have paſſed, and on the happy proſpect before us.

Salut et reſpect,

THOMAS PAINE.

The orator ſaid—"The gift of Thomas Paine is trifling indeed—but compared to the revolting injuſtice this faithful friend to liberty has ſuffered by our government, and the poverty of our colleague, you will in this view find he has done much. I demand, therefore, that the letter of Thomas Paine be printed, and that honourable mention be made. Theſe two propoſitions were adopted with unanimity.

FRANKFORT, JAN. 19.

From Turkey we learn, that the Porte has taken ſerious meaſures againſt the rebels. Sixty thouſand dollars is offered for the head of the Pacha of Widdin. The Seraſkier of Romelie has marched at the head of 80,000 men towards Boſnie.

ULYSSES.

IT is obſerved by thoſe who have made the world their ſtudy that for flattery to be ſucceſsful, it muſt enter the heart by the inroad where the paſſions are ready to receive it. It is for this reaſon, that the ſkilful lover always addreſſes his miſtreſs on the ſcore of her beauty, which he knows is the only praiſe ſhe will liſten to with complaiſance.

To tell a lady that her mind is cultivated and enlightened, or that her acquaintance with letters is profound, would be cooly heard, or be perhaps rejected with indignation; but when it is whiſpered in the fair one's ear with ſoft and melliſluent accents that her eyes emulate the diamond in luſtre, that her ſhape was formed by the hand of harmony, and poliſhed by the ſiſter-graces; that ſhe moves a goddeſs, and ſmiles an angel: then, the countenance of the nymph denotes approbation, and, pleaſed with herſelf, ſhe feels a predilection of her lover.

It is, however, ludicrous to think how far this incenſe is ſometimes carried. My friend, Major Ticonderago, related to me pleaſantly the other day, that going down one morning to his breakfaſt room in his ſlippers and robe de chambre, he overheard his nephew making love to his wife's waiting woman in the following manner:

"I ſwear by the ſun that now revives the world with his animating rays, that till I beheld again thoſe bright eyes that repoſe has given vivacity to, I was ſorrowful and languid, and drooped like the lily of the field: my ſpirit was broken and my happineſs was gone. But, now, lovely angel, and treaſure of my ſoul, thy preſence, which is balm to my wounded heart, inſpires me with gladneſs, and ſooths my mind to tranquility. By this hand which I now preſs with tranſport to my lips, and which ſurpaſſes in whiteneſs the moſt exquiſitely poliſhed ivory, by this fair hand I ſwear, that Ovid ne'er loved his Corinna, Catullus his Leſbia, Petrarch his Laura, nor Yorick his Eliza, as I love thee, thou paragon of perfection. Witneſs groves! witneſs ye ſtreams! oh witneſs ye hills, dales, rocks, brooks, and ſhady groves, the force, plenitude and exuberance of my paſſion!"

To this the nymph anſwered with a ſigh, and palpitating heart, "Oh Strephon you are a dangerous creature. Why do you ſay ſuch moving things to me. Remember I am but a poor weak woman you know my ſenſibility." "What then, reſumed the enamoured ſwain, thou condeſcendeſt to avow a reciprocal flame! oh ſilver-words, oh honeyed-accents, oh nectar and ambroſia to my ſorrows, will exonerate my mind and reſtore me to felicity. Amiable and ſweet enchantreſs! If a heart held in ſoft captivity by the blazing refulgence of your charms, that knows no guile and is a ſtranger to duplicity, can make you happy by its poſſeſſion, take it and fold it in your inviting arms. If rapture, ſolicitude tranſport, deſire, love, pure and unſullied—but I want words to expreſs myſelf—and oſculatory eloquence muſt plead for me.

Here the Major, tired of hearing ſuch ſtuff and incoherence, preceded down ſtairs, and his walk being overheard by his hopeful nephew and his douce amie, the one flew off at a tangent through this door, and the other through that.

But I remember once, in travelling through France, to have heard exclamations not leſs touching between two lovers, who after three days of abſence and torture, met again on the fourth. It was, I think, as follows:

C'eſt toi! Quel bonheur! Comme j'ai ſuoffert! Et moi! Que de larmes! Helas! Sans l'eſperance! Sans toi! Combien de fois! La vie étoit un fardeau! Que dis-tu! O mon amie! O mon amant!

I know not whether this exuberance of adulation which the candidate for ſmiles of the fair conſiders his paſſe-partout, be not as ſtriking an exemplification of the frivolity of him who diſpenſes it, as of the weakneſs of her who receives it. An enlightened and dignified mind finds no occaſion to have recourſe to ſuch petty artifices, and far-ſought expedients. The man of ſenſe and good-breeding, which always accompany one another, will pleaſe without the adventitious aid of flattery or diſſimulation, and though he be inſinuating, it is without ſtudy or deſign.

THE CLUSTER.—No. XIII.

REFLECTIONS ON THE INCONSISTENCY OF MAN.

Ah! how unjuſt to nature and himſe'f
Is thoughtleſs, thankleſs, inconſiſtent man.
YOUNG.

MAN is a being endowed with rational faculties capable of exerciſing them to his to his beſt advantage, and forming for himſelf a ſcheme of conduct that will operate for his future good, and the general benefit of his fellow creatures.

There is not a deſcendant of Adam who is not in a greater or leſs degree impreſſed with ſome idea of the deſign of his exiſtence. A greater part are perſuaded of the certainty of eternity, and conſider the ſole intention of the preſent life as a ſtate of probation preparatory therefor. However ſtrongly this important truth may be imprinted on the mind, yet but an inſignificant proportion of the human race conform to the reaſonableneſs of improvement, but run directly counter to the dictates of their own reaſon and intereſt? with a degree of ſtupidity and madneſs that contradict the formation and attributes of rational man.

The paths of the preſent life are wiſely beſtrewed with briars and thorns, to choak up the paſſage that we may look beyond them, and anticipate with longing eyes the deſired country of peace and happineſs. A youth when he embarks into life, is fully convinced in his own mind of the fruitleſſneſs of ſearch after happineſs, by any other means than that which naturally reſults from the exerciſe of virtue. Aged experience points out the proper line of rectitude, and wiſdom ſhews the abſurdity of ſeeking for that which is not attainable. When, I ſay, a man that firſt ſets into the world, is perſuaded in his own mind, of the only ſolid happineſs that can be derived from the preſent life is the exerciſe of virtue; and not only here, but that its influence extends to thoſe parts of our exiſtence which lie beyond the grave, and that our whole eternity is to take its colour from thoſe hours which we here ſpend in the practice of virtue or vice," nothing would be a greater inconſiſtency in nature for him thus to violate his own conſcience and future happineſs, to plunge himſelf into the inextricable vortex of the ſinful and inordinate pleaſures of his own appetites.

Eſpecially when we conſider that the appetites of man are like the immortal mind, never ſatiated, nor never enjoy a ſufficiency. Once gratified, it ceaſes not its influence till it throws its victim upon the enervated fabric of old age. When the ſources of pleaſure are abſorbed by the hand of time, and when enjoyments looſes its taſte, then we caſt the longing lingering look behind." And mourn with heart-felt regret, the long loſt hours of youth and opportunity. The painful corrodings of a retroſpect of the paſt life; and the wretched forebodings of a ſpeedy diſſolution racks the mind with the complicated torture of recollected follies and approaching miſeries.

The idea of eternity is at once a pleaſing, dreadful conſideration, and ought to make ſuitable impreſſions upon the heart of every finite being. Its importance cannot be too highly eſteemed; and as the ſtate of probation is but ſhort and feeling, ſo it cannot be too well improved.—The ſound of eternity conveys alarming ideas, even to the mind of the virtuous man.—Imagination itſelf ſtarts at the thought of arriving at that period when the beginning of our exiſtence, ſhall entirely be forgotten; and fixed between the mild extreams of an incalculable eternity.

Every rational man therefore will repel with ardor, the poiſonous ſhafts of his vicious propenſities and ſacrifice at the temple of virtue the ſuitable hours of improvements; that the deſign of his preſent exiſtence may be anſwered by the complete fruition of an eternity of happineſs.

ADDRESS TO HEALTH.

NYMPH of the roſy cheek and beaming eye,
Why fly'ſt thou from thy humble ſuppliant's pray'r?
Condemn'd in vain to breathe the bitter ſigh—
Condemn'd to feel the influence of deſpair.

Of thee bereft, muſt all my languid days
Injoyous glide, and wilt thou never deign
My roof to viſit with thy cheering rays,
And diſſipate the ſick'ning cloud of pain.

For ſtill alike to me creation ſhews
Whether black ſtorms deform the inclement day,
Or the bright ſun in radiant glory goes
Rejoicing on his own appointed way.

The ſpring returns—but ah! 'tis not for me—
I have no pleaſure in her genial ſmile,
Nor learning's charms nor muſic's minſtrelſy
Can drooping ſickneſs, languor, pain beguile.

Long has thy abſence been, O! blooming maid,
And wilt thou ne'er return this heart to cheer;
To brace theſe nerves, this ſinking fraim to aid,
And ſtop the progreſs of the riſing tear.

Hope whiſpers that thou wilt dear goddeſs come,
With thee I'll climb the mountains airy ſide,
Inhale the breeze rich with the ſpring's perfume
View the ſail flutt'ring o'er the perſſingtide.

With thee at morn's firſt bluſh will I ariſe,
With thee I'll watch the riſing ſun's firſt ray;
Behold him ſhedding o'er th' encrimſon'd ſkies.
The golden beam that renovates the day.

NEW YORK, APRIL 9.

The proceedings of Congreſs, at the preſent moment, are importan , and merit the ſerious attention of every friend to peace. John Adams ſeems determined on war: This is not to be ſo much wondered at, when we recollect that he will act in the capacity of Commander in Chief. Has not this old warrior already ſeen ſufficient of its dreadful effects? Ought not his appetite for carnage to have been ſatiated by the many bloody campaigns in which he has been engaged? Has he not already gained ſufficient military fame? No; he pants after glory; like Cæſar, he laments that there are no more worlds left for him to conquer. While we reſpect the old veteran, for his warlike atchievements, during our late ſtruggle for independence, let us petition our Councils to prevent him from drawing his all powerful and avenging ſword, leſt he ſhould not again ſheathe it, until he had exterminated from our country, the very name of republicaniſm.

The Senate have reſolved to publiſh the communication received from the Preſident on the 3d, inſt. excepting however the inſtructions. This vote had a majority of two.

We are informed, that Iſaac Garretſon of York County Pennſylvania, has obtained a Patent for conſtructing and uſing a ſea veſſel of his invention, which he calls the Eagle, on principles by which ſhe can be kept from ſinking and brought into port, after her bottom is ſo much broken, as to render it impoſſible to keep her afloat by the pumps now in uſe; neither will ſhe overſet, or heel as veſſels uſually do, by the wind, with her ſails all ſet, in a hard gale they being ſo hung, as to tend to keep her maſts upright.

This invention may prove of great utility if it ſucceeds in practice, even to the ſaving of ſhips and cargoes as well as the lives of the mariners.

At a large and reſpectable meeting of the Electors of the City and County of New-York, held at Hunter's Hotel on Friday evening, 5th of April, MARINUS WILLET in the Chair, JOHN MERCEREAU, Secretary, the following gentlemen were nominated, as Candidates to the enſuing Election, viz.

PRIVATE TUITION.

A Gentleman, lately from England, reſpectfully informs the inhabitants of New-York, that he propoſes the tuition of young ladies and gentlemen, at their own houſes. The former he would inſtruct in reading, writing, common arithmetic, hiſtory, aſtronomy, geography, and the uſe of the globes, with the uſual departments of moderate literature: that is, he would initiate them in the graces of the French language, and ſoon render them familiar with the epiſtolary and every other compoſition in their own. The latter he would make converſant, excluſive of geography, &c. with the Greek and Latin grammars, which, by a method not often practiſed, he would teach at the ſame time, and hence bring them quickly acquainted with Homer in the one, and Virgil in the other language; poets by no means difficult of acceſs, but who mutually illuſtrate each other, and were always firſt cultivated by the ancients themſelves.

He propoſes likewiſe, to teach French ladies or gentlemen at their own houſes, the Engliſh language in all its richneſs, copiouſneſs, idiomatical and grammatical purity: whom he deſpairs not of giving, in time, an eaſy, juſt and true accent.

Terms half a dollar the leſſon: Entrance, two dollars. A line addreſſed to I. Davis, 43 Ferry ſtreet, will be duly attended to. April 9. 1w

For Publication by Subscription,

A celebrated and much admired New Novel,

ENTITLED,

THE CHILDREN OF THE ABBEY.

A Tale, in Four Volumes.

BY REGINA MARIA ROCHE,

Author of the Maid of the Hamlet, and Vicar of Lanfdown.

"A matchless pair,
"With equal virtue form'd and equal grace,
"The same, distinguish'd by their sex alone;
"Her's the mild lustre of the blooming morn,
"And his the radiance of the sun."

THOMSON.

THIS Novel came out in London last year, 1797; we hear of but one copy's having been imported into this city. The avidity with which this has been called for at Mr. Caritat's Circulating Library, and the universal encomiums made upon it by ladies and gentlemen of taste who have perused it, induces us to issue proposals for its republication.

Among the many Works of this kind that have lately appeared, none are more worthy of general approbation than this. The narrative is natural and interesting; the language easy, correct, and, in many instances, elegant, and the sentiments throughout well calculated of supporting the mind under misfortune and calumny, however severe, and that virtue will at last be amply rewarded.

The London edition sold for a dollar and a quarter a volume; we (provided this proposal meets with sufficient patronage) will print it equally well. two volumes in one, at a dollar a volume stitched, or a dollar and a quarter handsomely bound, making two dollars and a half for the set, half the price of the London edition. Each volume to be paid for on delivery.

PROPOSALS,

3. It will be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers are obtained to defray the expences of printing.

THE

INTERESTING TRAVELS

OF

JOHN LEDYARD,

WITH A SUMMARY OF HIS LIFE,

Are now in the hands of the Printer; and the following Proposals are offered to the Public for Printing the same by Subscription.

CONDITIONS.

I. It shall be printed on fine paper, with a new type, ornamented with a full length portrait of the Author, in the attitude of taking leave, on his departure for Africa.

II. It will be published in a large octavo form, handsomely bound and lettered—calculated to contain between four and five hundredpages; making an elegant library volume.

III. The price to subscribers will be two dollars a volume; one half the money to be paid at the time of subscribing and the remainder on delivery of the Work.

THE solicitude expressed by the public for this long expected Work; the character of the Author, and the celebrity of the travels, render unnecessary, to most Americans, encomiums which are ordinarily used in recommending books to public patronage. To those who have not heard of Mr. John Ledyard and his travels. the following character, extracted from a Work published by the London African Society, may not be amiss:

"FORCIBLY impressed by the objects which he saw, and naturally led to compare them with those which the other regions of the globe had presented to his view, he describes with the energy of an original observer, and exhibits in his narrative the varied effects of similarity and contrast.

—Having traversed the world by water, in his great attempt to do the same by land he had nearly penetrated to the Pacific ocean, when he was seized upon, and banished from her territories by the empress of Russia.—

"On his arrival in England, Sir Joseph Banks told him, knowing his disposition, that he believed he could recommend him to an adventure almost as perilous as the one from which he had returned; and then communicated to him the wishes of the association for discovering the inland countries of Africa.

"Ledyard replied, that he had always determined to traverse the continent of Africa as soon as he had explored the interior of North America; and as Sir Joseph had offered him a letter of introduction, he came directly to the writer of these memoirs. I spread the map of Africa before him, and tracing a line from Cairo to Sennar, and from thence westward, in the latitude and supposed direction of the Niger, I told him that was the route by which it was desired that Africa might, if possible, be explored. I asked him when he would set out—"To-morrow morning," was his answer: But before I had learned from the note the name and business of my visitor, I was struck with the manliness of his person, the breadth of his chest, the openness of his countenance, and the inquietude of his eye.

"His person was remarkably expressive of activity and strength; his manners, though unpolished, were neither uncivil or unpleasing: Little attentive to difference of rank, he seemed to consider all men as his equals, and as such he respected them: His genius, though irregular, was original and comprehensive;—ardent in his wishes, yet calm in his deliberations; daring in his purposes, but guarded in his measures; impatient of controul, yet capable of strong endurance; adventrous beyond the conception of ordinary men yet wary, and considerate, and attentive to all precautions; he appeared to be formed by nature for atchievements of hardihood and peril.

Selected Poetry.

A FAREWEL TO THE WORLD.

By the Abbe de L'Attaignant

NOW verging on my eightieth year,
'Tis surely time to looſe each fear
Of Death's terific call;
Content that life and I ſhould part.
With ſmiles I greet each welcome dart—
Good night, companions all.

Each bliſs I've o'er and o'er enjoy'd
Each paſſion feels in me deſtroy'd
My ſtock of comfort's ſmall:
When fit for nothing we are grown,
We can't, I think, too ſoon be gone—
Good night companions all.

'Tis heavens decree, we firſt ſhould live,
Againſt whoſe power 'twere vain to ſtrive;
I feel I ſoon muſt fall.
Forc'd every ill of age to bear,
Can happier hours be look'd for here?
Good night, companions all!

Tho' rack'd from morn to night the brain,
Knowledge of all things to obtain,
On this im perfect ball:
More wiſdom ſtill we ſeek,
We never can depart leſs weak—
Good night, companions all!
